Brendan Cox began his 23 year career in law enforcement as a patrol officer with the Albany Police Department. Early on, he was promoted up through detective sergeant in the Children and Family Services Unit. He subsequently served as a lieutenant in Special Operations before he returned to the Children and Family Services Unit as a detective lieutenant. In 2017, Chief Cox retired from policing. He is currently the Director of Policing Strategies at the L.E.A.D. National Support Bureau.
