Governor Kevin Stitt
State Capitol
2300 N Lincoln Blvd.
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73105

Dear Governor Stitt:

Thank you for leading the country in swift responses to addressing the threat of COVID-19 in our justice system. Having served Oklahoma law enforcement, we commend your decision to commute the sentences of hundreds of prisoners. We agree that the public safety benefits of releasing them far outweigh the risks, but we are concerned that this simply is not enough to protect the health of our communities.

On behalf of the Law Enforcement Action Partnership (LEAP), we write to express grave concern over the spread of COVID-19 throughout Oklahoma's correctional facilities, justice system, and communities. Representing thousands of current and former police, judges, prosecutors, and corrections officials across the US, we ask that you immediately issue an executive order to further reduce incarceration in correctional facilities. A sample executive order is attached to illustrate our recommendations.

We urge you to release people who are elderly, medically at-risk, serving time for non-violent crimes, or serving time for technical parole/probation violations. Transmission between prisoners, officers, and staff will quickly spread outside the facilities to the families of officers and staff, accelerating the pandemic. Governors have acted on this issue in Kentucky and elsewhere. Tragically, efforts in New York are coming too late, as Rikers Island is already facing an unmanageable crisis.

There is strong public support for dramatically reducing jail and prison populations to slow the spread of the coronavirus. Sixty-six percent of likely voters, including 59% of those who identify as "very conservative," said that elected officials should be considering measures to reduce populations in prisons and jails as a response to coronavirus.¹ Criminal justice leaders are already taking action to safely reduce correctional populations.²

We write to you as the sole actor with the authority to achieve system-level results with clarity, consistency, and vision. We suggest you take the following steps right now to prevent the spread of COVID-19 in correctional facilities and beyond:

1. Release medically high-risk people in state custodial facilities. We urge you to use your clemency powers to begin a process of immediate review and presumptive release for all people identified by the CDC as particularly at-risk – older people and people with underlying health conditions or who are otherwise immune-compromised – whose sentences would end in the next two years and who do not pose a significant public safety risk.
2. Reduce overall populations in state custodial facilities. Using your clemency powers, begin a process of immediate review and presumptive release for:
 - a. anyone incarcerated for technical violations of probation or parole, and/or
 - b. anyone whose sentence would end in the next 180 days.
3. Reduce medically high-risk and overall populations in local custodial facilities. Direct local stakeholders, including police, prosecutors, and judges, to take concrete steps to reduce the intake of people into local custodial facilities. These steps would include:
 - a. stopping arrests for low-level offenses and issuing citations in lieu of arrest for other offenses,
 - b. suspending the use of cash bail and limiting pretrial detention to cases with a significant risk of flight or charges indicating high risk of violent reoffending, and
 - c. setting conditions of release that allow incarcerated people to care for family at risk for COVID-19.

It is challenging for local jurisdictions to respond effectively to this crisis, since it requires so many different agencies to coordinate. The justice system needs state-level guidance from your office in order to act swiftly, properly allocate resources, and minimize casualties. The coronavirus pandemic is testing every one of our institutions. Elected officials and other stakeholders who make the right decisions right now - when it matters most - will be remembered for their bravery, wisdom, and foresight.

Below is a draft executive order that you could adapt to immediately address this crisis. Thank you for your time and leadership.
